Art Unit: 3723

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made. *

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dolinski et al in view of Gardner.

Dolinski et al shows an installation tool comprising a threaded rod 150, a bushing 170, and a threaded drive nut 160 having a cylindrical neck section.

Gardner broadly teaches that an installation tool can have multiple parts of different sizes (eg., Figure 2 of Gardner) that may be interchanged to adapt the tool to different objects to be installed.

To make multiples of any of the individual tool parts (eg., threaded rod, bushing, and drive nut) of the Dolinski et al tool such that each tool part has a different size would have been obvious for one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made in view of the broad teaching of Gardner et al. One of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to do this in order to universally adapt the Dolinski et al tool to different sized objects. The type of object being engaged by the tool is a matter of intended use that has no patentable significance.

Claims 2-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dolinski et al in view of Gardner et al supra and further in view of Swanson.

Swanson teaches the use of a puller tool utilizing a threaded rod wherein a washer and a spacer are only sometimes part of the puller tool. To provide a washer and spacer in the above applied tool of Dolinski et al in view of Gardner et al would have been obvious for one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made in view of the disclosure of Swanson. One of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to do this in order to desirably space the working end of the tool from the object as desired depending on the configuration of the object.

Claim 5 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
